WHERE INNOVATION THRIVES

The UC Livermore Collaboration Center (UCLCC) is a system-wide UC asset that offers a robust collection of capabilities and facilities aimed at connecting people and ideas across the UC system, which encompasses ten campuses, five medical centers, a statewide agriculture and natural resources program and three UC-affiliated national labs.

It offers UC faculty members, researchers, post-docs, post-bacs and students a rare opportunity to interact with colleagues at the national labs in sustainable engagements that produce results only made possible by cross-disciplinary teams working together. Such engagements can lead to new funding opportunities, enduring partnerships and exciting opportunities for faculty and students alike.

UCLCC IS REVITALIZING COLLABORATION

UCLCC's intuitively designed facilities and expert staff are dedicated to sparking spirited interactions that lead to new solutions for persistent scientific and technical challenges. We've based our collaboration model on several successful programs, where longer interactions with ample time to discuss and debate in an open and inclusive format lead to more impactful outcomes. Anyone affiliated with UC is welcome to request use of the space. Visit our website for more details.

Regardless of your area of interest, UCLCC gives preference to those groups pursuing at least one of the following:

Research and Innovation that advances science, technology and engineering

Workforce Development that expands education and training opportunities to enhance employee job skills and cultivate knowledge

Pipeline Enhancement that improves recruitment and development of future talent inspired by the missions of UC and its affiliated national labs

Outreach that creates strong bonds with the broader community through UC and national lab-sponsored events

Workplace Improvement that fosters innovative facility design and workplace cultures that embrace exploration

BENEFITS ABOUND

UCLCC's staff has deep experience helping people design programs that move beyond traditional formats. As such, the UCLCC approach can:

- Foster more effective programs that optimize the talents of relevant members of the UC community
- Broaden and accelerate research programs and discoveries
- Open new and creative funding opportunities
- Offer exciting development opportunities for junior faculty, post-doctoral researchers, and students across the undergraduate and graduate communities
- Help early career faculty broaden their research teams
